

Legal Writing Institute
One Day Writing Workshop
University of Baltimore School of Law
December 13, 2013

8:30 am – 9:00 am	Conference Check In Coffee, tea, light breakfast (Lower Level-Floor 0.5)
9:00 am -9:15 am	Dean's Welcome Dean Ronald Weich (Lower Level-Floor 0.5)
9:15 am – 10:00 am	Plenary Session Old School Rhetoric & New School Cognitive Science Lucy Jewel, University of Tennessee College of Law (AL 102)
10:15 am – 11:15 am	Panel Presentation Bringing in the Practitioners (AL102) ----- Using Local Attorneys in Panel Discussions Brooke McDonough, George Washington University Incorporating the Local Bar in the Classroom Amy Meyers & Carla Boles, Charlotte School of Law How In-Class Discussion with Prosecutors Helped Students Better Understand a Criminal Problem Sherri Keene, University of Maryland Francis King Carey School of Law
11:30 am-12:15 pm	Concurrent Sessions I Improving Our Classroom
	Transforming the Internal Office Memo into an External Document Sarah Malik, George Washington University (AL109)	Moving from Lecture to Practice: Integrating a Negotiation Exercise into a Lawyering Skills and Values Course Amanda Foster, Florida Northeastern (AL204)
12:30 pm – 1:30 pm	Lunch & Presentation The Millennial Affinity for Authority and the Professionalism Paradox Tracy McGaugh Norton, Touro Law School (12 th Floor)
1:45 pm- 2:30 pm	Panel Discussion What do Practitioners Need and Want? (AL102) ----- Are we Listening? Survey of the Profession Claudia Diamond & Catherine Finn, University of Baltimore School of Law Writing as an In-House Lawyer: How is it Different? Chris Farris, George Washington University
2:45 pm - 3:30 pm	Concurrent Sessions II
	Are We Too "Kind" to Our Students? Michael Sackey, Tulane University Law School (AL109)	Teaching Legal Writing in the Deep Dark Shadow of the Bar Exam Adam Todd, University of Dayton School of Law (AL204)