AFCC MD Chapter's 2nd Annual Chapter Meeting and Educational Seminar

"There's Gotta Be Another Way"

Featuring a panel of experts, including Dr. Arnie Shienvold, a nationally renowned psychologist and expert in the area of child custody evaluations, family mediation and psychotherapy.

Do you ever worry that moving families of separation and divorce through the "system" is so fraught with overwhelming and irreparable problems that making change seems impossible? Do you feel you are faced with so few options to resolve complicated high conflict custody cases other than long, drawn-out litigation or expensive custody evaluations? And, how about when you have no ability to offer families with few resources a way to interpret and apply the research on child development to their children, so they can make more informed decisions? If you've ever experienced these frustrations, this is the seminar for you!

This seminar explores meaningful alternatives to costly and protracted custody litigation and custody evaluations that many individuals simply cannot afford. We will explore how to offer families with limited resources the ability to obtain the specific and essential child development and other social science information necessary to allow them to engage in a more informed decision-making process. We will explore what options and processes are available, short of a custody evaluation, to help parents determine what parenting plan is best for their child, including situations involving children with special needs, domestic violence, substance abuse, and mental illness. If you've ever felt frustrated by the seemingly limited options available to meet the needs of families, then this is an event you can't miss!
